Virginia Placement Test (VPT)

English - Practice Test

This written copy of the VPT English Practice Test is intended to provide students a way to prepare for the types of questions that will appear on the VPT and build some familiarity with the material.

For additional assistance in preparing to take the placement test, including taking the practice test online, visit the Learning Technology Center website at: http://virginiawestern.edu/services/ltc/placement.php.

We recommend that students take the online practice test whenever possible. The online version produces a score report that can be used as a diagnostic tool to help students identify areas of deficiency and provides an opportunity to experience the test as it will actually appear.
Question 1

The test you are about to begin is an English Practice Exam. This exam does not contain an essay portion. The actual VPT-English Exam will have an essay portion, in which you will select from two essay topics. You will only be required to respond to one essay topic.

Question 2 of 36

Excerpt from "Biological Diversity: How Are We Changing Life on Earth?" by Tracey Cohen

People tend to think that the crisis of biodiversity, as well as other environmental problems created by human activities, can be corrected with things like better technology. Science and technology can provide crucial information and strategies, but there are limits to their usefulness. Captive breeding programs, for instance, can help save no more than a few hundred of the 1 million known animal species. On a larger scale, too many interdependent species are being lost, often before their ecological roles are fully known. And it would be impossible to create artificially all the conditions necessary for complex, healthy ecosystems.

The true problem of preserving life on Earth is ethical. It means recognizing that other species have a right to continue living. This recognition involves drastic changes in the ways we see and use natural resources. It also means changing the way we see ourselves in the larger community of living things. We need what environmental science professor David Orr called a "biophilia revolution." Biophilia is, in essence, a love of life and things that are alive. A biophilia revolution would combine a reverence for life with efficient use of resources and simpler lifestyles. Until that happens, the plight of biodiversity will not be solved.

According to the selection, the author believes that —

A. Preserving the biodiversity of the planet is an ethical imperative.

B. captive breeding policies must be implemented correctly and safely.

C. biophilia is a radical concept with little potential for practical application.

D. human beings can use technological advances to reverse ecological damage.
Question 3 of 36
Read the selection and answer the question.

If you wanted to find out more information about "the crisis of biodiversity," which of the following resources would be best to use?

A. The encyclopedia entry for "biophilia"
B. An online chat forum for environmentalists
C. The website for National Geographic magazine
D. A smartphone app that tracks ecological phenomena

Question 4 of 36
Read the selection and answer the question.

If you were taking notes on the selection, which of the following details would be most important to include?

A. Other animal species besides human beings have a right to continue living on the planet.
B. The planet can only sustain life if we work to sustain the planet, in part through mindful living.
C. Environmental science professor David Orr defines biophilia as a love of life and all living things.
D. The decline in biodiversity cannot be undone, even with captive breeding programs and technological advances.
Letter from Birmingham Jail by Martin Luther King Jr.

You may well ask: "Why direct action? Why sit-ins, marches and so forth? Isn't negotiation a better path?" You are quite right in calling, for negotiation. Indeed, this is the very purpose of direct action. Nonviolent direct action seeks to create such a crisis and foster such a tension that a community which has constantly refused to negotiate is forced to confront the issue. It seeks so to dramatize the issue that it can no longer be ignored. My citing the creation of tension as part of the work of the nonviolent-resister may sound rather shocking.

But I must confess that I am not afraid of the word "tension." I have earnestly opposed violent tension, but there is a type of constructive, nonviolent tension which is necessary for growth. Just as Socrates felt that it was necessary to create a tension in the mind so that individuals could rise from the bondage of myths and half-truths to the unfettered realm of creative analysis and objective appraisal, we must we see the need for nonviolent gadflies to create the kind of tension in society that will help men rise from the dark depths of prejudice and racism to the majestic heights of understanding and brotherhood.

The purpose of our direct-action program is to create a situation so crisis-packed that it will inevitably open the door to negotiation. I therefore concur with you in your call for negotiation. Too long has our beloved Southland been bogged down in a tragic effort to live in monologue rather than dialogue.

Which of the following best summarizes Martin Luther King Jr.'s view of tension?

A. All tension can ultimately be used for good.
B. All tension is unstable, even if it is constructive.
C. Some tension is necessary to stir people into action.
D. Some tension is needed to punish and expel prejudice.
Question 6 of 36

Which of the following assumptions does the author of this selection make about the audience?
A. They do not support equality.
B. They have participated in a sit-in.
C. They respect Socrates as a thinker.
D. They understand the purpose of tension.
Mr. Bojangles's Stoplight

(1) Luther "Bojangles" Robinson was a native of Richmond, Virginia. (2) Having lost both of his parents by the age of seven, Robinson recalled that he stole the name of his brother Bill and began shining shoes and tap dancing for petty cash. (3) After joining a traveling dance troupe, he eventually found himself performing at nightclubs in Chicago. (4) Although his audiences were limited, his talent did not go unnoticed. (5) Under the direction of a stage manager, Marty Forkins, he was soon pulling in $3,500 a week. (6) Robinson claimed that his feet had a mind and musicality that was all their own, a statement that wasn't too hard to believe given the way he danced: his feet lively and ingeniously creative, his upper body relaxed and lit with an entertainer's face.

(7) At the age of fifty, Robinson finally broke into Broadway. (8) The musical Blackbirds allowed him to debut his self-choreographed "stair dance," which became one of his most memorable performances. (9) From then on, Robinson's career also included acting, earning him a number of famous roles alongside America's sweetheart, Shirley Temple. (10) Yet, underneath his new-found stardom, Robinson never forgot his rocky childhood. (11) During a visit to his hometown, he witnessed a near accident as a couple of schoolchildren attempted to cross a busy street. (12) According to reports, he immediately put down enough money to have a traffic light installed. (13) Over the course of his lifetime, he gave away more than one million dollars, leaving him bankrupt at the time of his death. (14) To this day, a statue of Bill Robinson remains at the intersection of Adams and West Leigh Streets. (15) It features Bojangles atop a set of stairs, much like the ones that graced his feet in real life.

Which of the following word changes would convey a more skeptical tone?

A. Change "stole" to "borrowed" (Sentence 2).

B. Change "claimed" to "believed" (Sentence 6).

C. Change "allowed" to "was a chance for" (Sentence 8).

D. Change "According to reports" to "Allegedly" (Sentence 12).

B  Sentence 6
C  Sentence 9
D  Sentence 12
"The New Colossus" by Emma Lazarus

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame,
With conquering limbs astride from land to land;
Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-hand
Glows world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame.
"Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!" cries she
With silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Excerpt from "Dark They Were, and Golden-Eyed" by Ray Bradbury

The rocket metal cooled in the meadow winds. Its lid gave a bulging pop. From its clock interior stepped a man, a woman, and three children. The other passengers whispered away across the Martian meadow, leaving the man alone among his family.

The man felt his hair flutter and the tissues of his body draw tight as if he were standing at the center of a vacuum. His wife, before him, seemed almost to whirl away in smoke. The children, small seeds, might at any instant be sown to all the Martian climes.

The children looked up at him, as people look to the sun to tell what time of their life it is. His face was cold.

"What's wrong?" asked his wife.

"Let's get back on the rocket."

"Go back to Earth?"

"Yes! Listen!"

The wind blew as if to flake away their identities. At any moment the Martian air might draw his soul from him, as marrow comes from a white bone. He felt submerged in a chemical that could dissolve his intellect and burn away his past.

Which of the following details best supports the idea that the main character is uneasy about their arrival on Mars?

A  "His wife, before him, seemed almost to whirl away in smoke."

B  "The children looked up at him, as people look to the sun to tell what time of their life it is."

C  "At any moment the Martian air might draw his soul from him, as marrow comes from a white bone."

D  "The other passengers whispered away across the Martian meadow, leaving the man alone among his family."

"I love America more than any other country in the world, and exactly for this reason, I insist on the right to criticize her perpetually." —James Baldwin

Which of the following paraphrases is an example of plagiarism?

A Writer James Baldwin believed that a love for one's country requires one to look critically at the practices of that country.

B If we wish to be truly patriotic, then we must exercise our right and responsibility to "criticize [America] perpetually," as James Baldwin has said.

C Writer James Baldwin said that he loved America more than any other country in the world, and exactly for this reason, he insisted on the right to criticize her perpetually.

D If you say, "I love America more than any other country in the world," as James Baldwin has said, then you must also, like Baldwin, "insist on the right to criticize her perpetually."
Mightier Than the Sword: An All-Too-True Tale of Felt-Tipped Woe

Twenty-five years ago, in a none-too-remarkable British town, a rather unremarkable thing happened: a woman swallowed a felt-tipped pen. Doctors, of course, will tell you that there is nothing unusual about finding foreign objects in people's stomachs, particularly if those "people" happen to be curious children. (In anticipation of the reader's question, the person in question here was not a child but a middle-aged woman in her fifties. No doubt by now, the reader is wondering just how a grown woman managed to swallow a pen.) The story goes that the woman was using the pen to examine a tonsil that was causing her pain. She opened her mouth and pointed to the tonsil at the back of her throat with the handy pen-turned-pointer; then, at what would prove to be a fateful moment, the woman's hand slipped, the pen fell, and, presumably by reflex, the woman swallowed it.

When her husband came home, she told him the story. He did not quite believe her, but he drove her to the hospital anyway, as any good husband would do. When they met with the physician, the physician did not quite believe her but performed all the appropriate medical exams anyway, as any good physician would do. The test results showed that everything was normal, and the woman was sent home with a good laugh by husband and physician alike.

Fast-forward to the present day: the woman is now seventy-six years old, still living in her none-too-remarkable town in Britain, when she begins to experience stomach pains. She goes to the doctor, who refers her to another doctor, who then runs a slew of standard medical exams. When the test results for the CT scan return, the doctor is stunned to find, floating inside the woman's digestive tract, what appears to be a single, felt-tipped marker. The woman only nods matter-of-factly at this news because, for her, it was not news at all.

The surprise, as it turned out, was not in the pen's discovery, but in its removal. After spending a quarter of a century inside the entrails of a human being, the pen still worked!

Which of the following alternate titles would lead readers to expect a more serious tone?

A Well, That's One Way to Write a Medical History

B An Old Woman Who Swallowed a Fly—or, a Pen

C Dangers of Ingesting Foreign Objects by the Elderly

D Eating Your Way to the Truth (or Just to the Hospital)
Question 21 of 36
Read the selection and answer the question.

The author's primary purpose in this selection is to —
A  provide readers with an entertaining anecdote.
B  convince readers that medical miracles can happen.
C  warn readers of the dangers of swallowing foreign objects.
D  motivate readers to advocate for themselves during doctor visits.

Question 22 of 36
Read the selection and answer the question.

It can be inferred from the selection that the —
A  townspeople thought the woman foolish for having swallowed a pen.
B  husband had complained about his missing pen in the weeks leading up to the incident.
C  physician cautioned the woman against using pens to examine her own tonsils in the future.
D  woman experienced no side effects from swallowing the pen in the intervening twenty-five years.
Excerpt from Moby-Dick by Herman Melville

(1) It was not a great while after the affair of the pipe, that one morning shortly after breakfast, Ahab, as was his wont, ascended the cabin-gangway to the deck. (2) There most sea-captains usually walk at that hour, as country gentlemen, after the same meal, take a few turns in the garden.

(3) Soon his steady, ivory stride was heard, as to and fro he paced his old rounds, upon planks so familiar to his tread, that they were all over dented, like geological stones, with the peculiar mark of his walk. (4) Did you fixedly gaze, too, upon that ribbed and dented brow; there also, you would see still stranger foot-prints—the foot-prints of his one unsleeping, ever-pacing thought.

Which of the following revisions would make the language of this selection less formal?

A   Change "as was his wont" to "as usual" (Sentence 1).
B   Change "take a few turns" to "meander" (Sentence 2).
C   Change "to and fro" to "hither and thither" (Sentence 3).
D   Change "fixedly gaze" to "steadily stare" (Sentence 4).

The tone of this selection can best be described as —

A   ominous.
B   oblivious.
C   objective.
D   optimistic.
Question 25 of 36

Which of the following is correct?

D An archaeological report from a Native American site
"When I Was One-and-Twenty" by A. E. Housman

When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say,
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies
But keep your fancy free."
But I was one-and-twenty,
No use to talk to me.
When I was one-and-twenty
I heard him say again,
"The heart out of the bosom
Was never given in vain;
'Tis paid with sighs a plenty
And sold for endless rue."
And I am two-and-twenty,
And oh, 'tis true, 'tis true.

*rue means "sorrow"

Which of the following reading strategies would be most helpful in approaching this selection?

Urban Homesteading: Where City and Farm Become One

(1) It used to be that farms looked like, well, farms: great, open spaces of rural land, where barnyard animals grazed contentedly on acres of sprawling cropland and grass. (2) These days, if you want to find a farm, you don't have to look any further than your own fenced backyard—or your neighbor's—in the city. (3) Urban homesteading is on the rise among people who favor healthy, sustainable, and community-based growing practices. (4) The movement toward urban homesteading is just about as local as it gets—homegrown produce harvested with admirable do-it-yourself stamina, even if doing it yourself means growing herbs in a container garden on your apartment balcony. (5) Some homesteaders in city and suburban neighborhoods even raise their own chickens. (6) (While most neighborhood ordinances prohibit roosters—neighbors usually don't take kindly to that pesky "cock-a-doodle-doo" morning ritual—they often permit residents to keep chickens as an ultra-local source of eggs.)

(7) Many urban homesteaders are moved to become more knowledgeable about, and involved in, the food they eat. (8) In an age when more and more food products are being genetically altered, transported thousands of miles, or grown with potentially harmful pesticides, one way of ensuring that food is safe and healthy is simply to grow it yourself. (9) It is a matter of health and conscience, sure, but also a matter of basic human joy. (10) Urban homesteaders may grow their own food, even if all they have is a modest community garden plot, because they believe in local, organic, and/or sustainably harvested food. (11) After all, such practices are good for people and planet alike. (12) But the movement to grow your own food is more than a political, social, or even economic one. (13) It is about the joys of getting dirty, cultivating delicious food, and reconnecting with that most basic of human pleasures: sharing homegrown food in a community.

Which of the following sentences could be eliminated without compromising the logic of the selection?

A  Sentence 3
B  Sentence 6
C  Sentence 8
D  Sentence 10
Question 35 of 36
